Young working professionals in India usually have specific brands of teas that they like, and those who are new to a neighbourhood often hunt for good places to have tea, for which they rely on word-of-mouth. There are already some such apps centred around coffee experiences, but not so much for tea. My app aims to let people search their area for stores that sell different flavours and brands of tea 'from the shelf', and also give recommendations for popular teas at stalls / cafes around them 'direct from the teapot'.
